Major Research Interests

My work to date has mainly focused on the European and global history of the First World War and on the urban experience of modern warfare. I have published articles and book chapters on the comparative urban history of the First World War, on refugeeedom during the conflict, and on humour in wartime. My publications have also investigated the historiography and global history of the First World War and the transformations of the belligerent state during the conflict. I am now writing on the reconstruction of devastated cities in interwar Europe as a case-study in urban resilience. I am also developing a new project on the global history of urban disasters and recovery in the era of the Great War (1906-1939). My work therefore lies at the intersection of urban history and critical disaster studies.

My teaching and editorial undertakings have similarly been driven by a strong commitment to the comparative and interdisciplinary study of Europe and the world in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Other professional activities

Professional Affiliations

- Fellow, Royal Historical Society
- Director, past president and co-founder of the International Society for First World War Studies (2001-2018)
The society gathers together over 300 scholars at every academic level in 27 countries worldwide. It runs a website and a discussion list (for further information see www.firstworldwarstudies.org). The Society has held eleven international conferences (Institut d'Etudes Politiques, Lyon in 2001; Oxford University, 2003; Trinity College, Dublin, 2005; Georgetown University / German Historical Institute, Washington, D.C, 2007; Imperial War Museum, London, 2009; Innsbrück, 2011; Paris, 2013; Trento/Padua, 2015; Oxford University, 2016; Melbourne, 2018; Leeds University, 2019; Gettysburg College, 2020).
In 2001 and 2003, I took on the responsibility for organizing, funding and managing our gatherings that assembled over 50 scholars from Europe, North America and Australia.
In September 2009, the Society launched First World War Studies, a peer-refereed journal published by Taylor & Francis and whose first issue came out in 2010.
